Abbot Principal To Encourage Academic Ties With Phillips

It will not be anything that happens overnight, but the new principal at Abbot Academy seems certain that there will be eventually some sort of academic fraternization between students at the all-girl preparatory school he is to head and the boys' on the Hill at Phillips Academy.

Donald A. Gordon, who will come to Andover from Kansas City next July to take over the key administrative post at Abbot, was in town this week to confer with officials at the private school and to get better acquainted with the staff and campus. He interrupted a whirlwind schedule long enough to talk with the TOWNSMAN about the future.

"The trustees at Abbot want to explore coordinate possibilities with Phillips Academy," he said, adding that "this had a lot to do with my interest in coming here."

The young, lanky native New Englander said that he believes that there are a lot of "human advantages" to co-educational education and that this is the basis for his plans to move in the direction of classroom confrontations between Abbot's girls and P.A.'s boys. (Similar thoughts have been expressed at Phillips in recent years, most recently in recommendations from a faculty steering committee.)

Gordon feels strongly about a theory of his that "part of being properly civilized as a person lies in the extent to which individuals understand the opposite sex." And he explains, "There is a lot of misunderstanding on the part of men as to what women are and vice versa."

Separation of the sexes at formative times, while it does many good things academically, prevents the most natural introduction to the other sex at the very time when it should come about, in Gordon's view. "I don't think the absence of girls (at the high school level) eliminates a distraction, I believe it adds to it," says the principal, recalling his own years at Phillips Academy.

Continuing the same discussion, Principal Gordon said he feels the biological facts of life should be introduced in the lower grades before physical changes come about that introduce embarrassment. Then, by the time students arrive at secondary school, they are ready to discuss such subjects as how girls differ from boys emotionally, he said.

At Abbot, Gordon is inheriting a strong traditional curriculum. This he plans to preserve, but he intends to "innovate and experiment" as well.

"I feel independent schools are in a unique position to innovate and that they have an obligation to do so," Gordon said. Private schools that do not experiment may have difficulty justifying their existence in the future, he added.

Gordon, who is at present headmaster of the co-educational Barstow School in Kansas City, says that one of the big problems for an administrator in his position is how to make life of the boarding student at a private school as nearly natural as possible. If independent schools do not make a greater effort to meet this problem, he said, this too could become a factor leading to their extinction.

What about the kind of teens he deals with in his work as compared with those of other generations - are they more rebellious?

No, says Gordon. Recalling the quote that "Today's liberalism is tomorrow's conservatism," the secondary school principal says

Erickson Submits $4,000,000 Budget

A tentative school department budget of over $4 million for 1968 has been submitted to Town Manager Richard Bowen by Supt. of Schools Edward I. Erickson. This represents an increase of slightly more than a million dollars over last year's figure.

The new budget, which emerged from Tuesday night's School Committee meeting fatter by $36,500, reflects an anticipated increase in the teachers' salary scale, now under negotiation between the Andover Teachers Assn. and the School Committee. The bachelor's minimum was expected to be set at $8,200 Wednesday night, after TOWNSMAN presstime. The $4,028,531 total, which Supt. Erickson stressed as a tentative one, breaks down into $3,202,796 for salaries and $825,735 for expenses.

The $758,000 increase for salaries over the 1967 budget includes $221,000 for 47 or 48 additional teachers in the system; as well as the expected increase in the teachers salary scale, plus incremental increases. Provision is also made for increases in secretarial and custodial pay. The total salary figure also includes $13,000 added by the School Committee which recommended setting aside $7,000 to cover the salary of a personnel administrator, and $6,000 to be added to the administrative salary budget.

The estimated expense budget of $831,235 is an increase over 1967 of $254,866. Maintenance of the new high school largely is responsible for doubling operation and plant maintenance.

Added to increases agreed upon at the School Committee meeting were $5000 for textbooks, a $5,000 library increase, $8,000 added to the student body activities budget, $500 for the health budget, to pay the school dentist who has been volunteering his services, and $5000 to cover professional collective bargaining negotiations.

JH Study Underway

A five-member committee has been named to determine whether or not Andover should invest in complete renovation of the present junior high school building or settle for making necessary repairs.

Chairman Philip K. Allen of the Board of Selectmen told other Selectmen Monday that he, Dr. Louis Galbiati, chairman of the School Committee and David Thompson, chairman of the Finance Committee had decided on the study committee, following the instructions of a Town Meeting

Welfare Department Moving Offices From Town Hall

The town welfare department will close its doors Dec. 1, pack up its bulging files into DPW trucks and move the entire operation to offices at 93 Main St. in Olde Andover Village. There will be no office hours on Dec. 1.

The department will reopen to see welfare recipients and applicants on Dec. 4, according to George W. Shipley, director.

Town Meeting authorized the move last week when it approved the leasing of space outside Town Hall for the growing department. In their new quarters, the welfare staff will have space for three private interview rooms and a separate office for two clerks. At Town Hall, the director and two social workers have been working in a single crowded office.

Shipley reports that the welfare work load is continuing to grow, particularly as a result of Medicaid. He says the volume of work for the two clerks alone has grown at least 50% in recent months. The two women are now processing monthly medical bills for roughly $22,000 a month instead of the $9000 to $10,000 as previously.

Until the state takes over local welfare operations, which it is slated to do if the question of financing is ever resolved, Andover is responsible for one sixth of the cost of this medical benefit program. The Federal government pays one half the total.

Other than Shipley, the staff of the welfare department is as follows: Miss Irene McCarthy and Miss Barbara Baker, social workers; Mrs. Mary McEvoy and Mrs. Eleanor Williams, clerks.

Specialists To Be Added

The School Committee unanimously passed Tuesday Dr. Richard Katz's motion that by 1970 each full-size elementary school in Andover have a full-time instructor in art, music, physical education, reading and guidance. Supt. Edward I. Erickson said that when the West School addition is completed, that school would probably have one and half instructors, sharing with Shawsheen.

100 Voices Will Sing "Messiah"

The Andover Male Choir and Choral Society will present their 37th annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" in Cochran Chapel at Phillips Academy this Sunday, Dec. 3, at 8 p.m.

Conducting the combined singing groups, as he has in every previous year, will be J. Everett Collins. In the chorus are more than 100 dedicated singers from Greater Lawrence who have been rehearsing for several weeks in preparation for the concert.

The soloists, all experienced oratorio singers, will be Aleatha Monro, soprano; Phyllis Alhady, alto; and Edward Monro, tenor. The accompanists will be Maxine Calt at the piano and Herbert Irvine, organist.

As in the past, admission is free, but a collection will be taken to defray expenses.

School Committeeman Richard Katz told his colleagues Tuesday night that the School Committee had been made to look like fools at the Nov. 20 special Town Meeting. Declaring that he now agrees with Committeeman William Doherty that the committee should make its own decisions on school needs without involving other boards, Katz moved that the superintendent's office prepare educational specifications for a new junior high school. The motion carried 3-1.

Dr. Katz referred to the fact that the School Committee went to Town Meeting without internal agreement about the future of the present junior high building, in spite of the fact that two preliminary conferences were held with other municipal officials to resolve the question.

As a consequence, voters and some key officials, including Town Manager Richard Bowen, responded to a motion from the floor which has led to the establishment of a special committee to determine whether or not the town should renovate or simply repair the structure. School Committeewoman Virginia H. Cole is already herself on record in opposition to expenditure of an estimated $2 million for complete renovation. She told Town Meeting that in her opinion, there is no "educational justification" for "moving walls" around and that a good program can be offered in the building if it is repaired and made safe.

Lone Dissenter

Mrs. Cole, lone dissenter Tuesday to Dr. Katz' motion for specifications for a new junior high school, agreed that the school committee should make its own decisions, and called again for cost estimates for necessary repair to the present building. She said that if the committee authorized by voters recommends repair, the School Committee should be ready with figures to check against such recommendations.

Mrs. Cole recalled that two years ago the state's junior high evaluation board had recommended certain specific repairs to the building and stated that part of the flooring and wiring system are unsafe. Both Doherty and Mrs.

Cole urged immediate repair of any unsafe wiring. The committee instructed Jack Berberian, general services supervisor, to get estimates for the cost of necessary repairs, and to check with the School Building Assistance Commission on whether the work required should be classed as repairs or renovation. The cost of repairs can come out of the school department budget, while renovations must go through the lengthier process of approval by Town Meeting.

At another point in the meeting, Superintendent Edward I. Erickson made it clear that after Christmas the junior high student body will be split into east and west junior high schools as originally planned. Chairman Louis Galbiati questioned this, citing the possibility that the study committee might recommend renovation, but Supt. Erickson said that the East-West division was the only feasible plan now.

School committeemen William Doherty and Mrs. Virginia Cole accepted the AEA's invitation to School Committee members to participate.

Ability grouping in the high school physical education program will be implemented in the fall. The School Committee unanimously passed Dr. Richard Katz's proposal, when Donald Dunn, physical

Campaign Half Way To Quota

Charles W. Lowrie, treasurer of the Essex County Health Association Inc., reports that the annual Christmas Seal Campaign has just passed the half-way mark of its $100,000 goal for 1967. To date $52,613.20 has been received from the 31 cities and towns in Essex County served by the Association. Andover residents have so far contributed $3,138 of a $5,658 goal.

"Each community," stated Lowrie, "has a quota, based on an anticipated increase over last year's returns, to meet the need for increased program activities. The money raised in the 1967 Christmas Seal Campaign will be used to provide a year-round program of community and patient services during the coming year. These services include tuberculin testing, chest X-rays, rehabilitation and social service for patients and their families."

"In cooperation with the other tuberculosis and respiratory disease associations in Massachusetts," he continued, "we contribute to the Massachusetts Medical Education Fund and the Massachusetts Tuberculosis and Health League Research Fund. These two funds provide Research and Medical Education which we could not support as an individual association."

The first newspaper to sell for one penny came out in the 1830's.

$500 Theft Investigated

Police are investigating the reported theft of some $500 worth of merchandise from Cole Hardware, but are withholding full information until the inquiry is completed.

An officer apprehended a suspect coming from the alley behind Cole's store Sunday evening which triggered the investigation and led to recovery of some of the missing items, including a $200 chain saw. Cole reports that present indications are that at least three juveniles may be involved.

Andover Thanksgiving Victory! 14 - 0

Andover's Golden Warriors proved to be good mudders on Thanksgiving Day when they met with North Andover for the traditional gridiron clash.

Adding a seventh unbeaten game to its 1967 record, the team defeated the Scarlet Knights 14-0. They were cheered by rain-soaked fans, many of whom stayed to the soggy finish.

Dave Paulekas scored Andover's first TD and Mike Sirois scored the second. Aiding in scoring the plays were Tom O'Leary, Mike Simeone, Steve Gesing, Randy Towne, Bruce Robb and Paul Hills.

Drug Abuse By Students Said Possible

Questions Tuesday on possible drug abuse in Andover, put to High School principal Philip Wormwood, Physical Education Director Donald Dunn and later William Igoe, guidance director, brought out Andover school officials' philosophy that drug abuse, where it exists, is not an isolated school problem, but a community problem which will be vulnerable only to a team approach.

Dunn told the School Committee he feels sure that there are a few cases of drug abuse among young people in town. Wormwood pointed out that the high school had planned a panel on drug abuse for an inservice program that was snowed out, but will be rescheduled. He said that programs to inform staff are essential for understanding of the problem, which is often oversimplified.

William Igoe and Vaughn Clapp, Asst. Supt., concurred with these officials and agreed that programs of student education must begin early.

Clapp explained that expansion of the physical education program will bring programs to bear starting at the elementary level, where subject of drugs, alcohol, sex, and smoking will naturally come up as part of the program. School officials agreed that the development of attitudes is much more difficult to achieve, but more effective, than simply stopping with the presentation of a factual program to the children.

Here's your comforting thought for today: The world changes so fast that you couldn't stay wrong all the time if you tried.

Morse Urges New Approach To Big Problems

Massachusetts Congressman F. Bradford Morse told a New York audience Tuesday that "we are on the verge of a dramatic breakthrough in public policy" through the expanded use of modern management techniques in the solution of critical public problems.

Morse was the principal speaker at a dinner sponsored by the Metropolitan New York chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers.

The Massachusetts legislator told the group that the development of systems management techniques by the private sector "holds great hope for the solution of urgent public problems such as pollution, transportation, urban development and education." He is the principal sponsor of legislation to create a National Commission on Public Management.

Citing the inadequacy of present public programs, Morse noted, "despite magnificent technological achievements in space, our air and water are unfit for consumption or recreation; our transportation system is in chaos, and our educational values out of tune with modern needs."

"Ways must be found to bring private management skills into the public sector to a greater degree," Morse declared. "Government, a necessary catalyst, can attract private capabilities using a variety of incentives."

The Congressman noted that the principal element of the systems approach, the ability to consider complicated problems as a comprehensive whole, was already finding its way into Congressional legislation such as the Clean Rivers Restoration Act, the model cities program, and the foreign aid bill.

Morse indicated that the principal obstacles to a new approach to public problem-solving lie in "traditional bureaucratic attitudes toward private enterprise and the profit motive, and a fear on the part of some social activists that business and government will control too large a share of American private decision-making." He predicted a key role for the nation's political leaders in "bridging the communications gap between those who suffer most from our failure to solve our problems and those who possess the greatest capacity to do so."

The four-term House Member, who serves on the Foreign Affairs Committee, warned his audience not "to ask too much of techniques. Without the substance of genuine social concern, sensitive political leadership, and a national commitment to problem-solving, all the techniques in the world will be to no avail. With those components, we are on the verge of the dramatic breakthrough in public policy we so critically need today."

Richardson Discusses Drug Usage

Plans for a new approach to drug abuse education were outlined this week by Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Commissioner of Education Owen B. Kiernan in a meeting with school officials from across the Commonwealth.

Attending from Andover were Donald Dunn, director of physical education for Andover schools; Ruth Wescott, school nurse; Joseph Dorsey and Virginia Tribou, physical education instructors at Andover High School.

At a day-long conference on "Drug Abuse and the Schools" at Framingham North High School Richardson said, "The recent and thoroughly-documented news reports of the murders, suicides and tragic deaths of young people who have fled from the world to the turned-on land of drugs and hallucinogens clearly describe the nature and scope of the problem confronting us."

"Law enforcement cannot solve this problem alone," said the Attorney General. "Instead, the solution lies in a two-front campaign, with law enforcement moving against those who violate the laws on drug use while the educational community instructs young people in the dangers - physical, psychological and legal - of drug abuse."

Richardson noted that state law imposes upon the Department of Education the responsibility to conduct instruction in the problem of drug abuse, but reported that "all too often our instruction has served either to frighten without informing or to arouse interest in experimentation with drugs."

He told those attending the conference that his office and the Department of Education are preparing an application for a federal grant for the development of a comprehensive program of drug abuse instruction for use in the state's schools.

He said that the efforts of the two departments would be aimed at discovering and evaluating effective methods of instruction and developing a program which will accurately and completely inform young people on drug problems.

"If we can make our students fully understand the problems of drug abuse," he said, "we'll have fewer problems."

Best Buys

No less than five different apple varieties are featured on this week's "best buys" in native produce announced by the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture: McIntosh, Cortland, Red and Golden Delicious and Baldwin apples.

The Bay State's greenhouse industry, now encompassing over 10 million square feet of glass-grown crops, is sending an abundance of vine-ripened tomatoes to market at attractive prices, as well as fresh native watercress, prized for color and flavor accents in soups, meats and salads.

Whole fresh cranberries, parsnips, carrots, turnips, buttercup and butternut squash, Des Moines and Blue Hubbard squash are all plentiful and low-priced. On dairy counters, extra large and large eggs are the biggest money-savers, in that order.

Then there was the old lady who berated the traffic cop because his car was not marked. "It's unfair," she said.

By Mary

There is beauty in a voice that has clarity and resonance. In direct contrast is the mumbler - the person who muffles three quarters of her words, particularly at the ends of sentences. When you're near her you say, "I beg your pardon?" or "What was that you just said?" Actually, these mumbler suffer from lazy tongues - and nothing more. Slurred words are brought about when tongue, lips, or jaws don't move actively enough. How about you? Look in the mirror and practice talking to yourself!

Parking Limit Promised

The Andover Chamber of Commerce reports that the town has agreed to pay particular attention to the problem of long-term parkers at the municipal parking lot, starting this week.

In a letter to members, ACC President George E. Heseltine said he had been told that parking limit signs will be posted in the metered sections of the lot and the limit enforced by a patrolling police officer. Persons who violate the limit, will be given tickets.

Said Heseltine: "This hopefully will eliminate the habit of some 'feeding the meter' for long periods of time. . . The parking limit and enforcement of this limit will insure more turnover and parking space for your customers during the Christmas shopping season.

Club License Is Questioned

The Selectmen approved renewal of an alcoholic beverage license for Indian Ridge Country Club Monday, but advised two spokesmen that it might be well for the club to protect the license by attaching a fee to dining memberships it has issued to a restricted mailing list free of charge.

The board also approved renewals for 23 other hotels, restaurants, package stores and clubs. Town Clerk Irving Piper called particular attention to the Indian Ridge license because of a recent newspaper advertisement which gave the impression that the general public would be served at the private golf club. Henry M. Sewell, manager, said that someone else had placed the ad and that it was withdrawn as quickly as possible after the clerk had pointed out that both the zoning variance granted the club when it opened and the terms of the club license it holds would make general use of the club dining room illegal.

Sewell said the club had never intended to issue a broad invitation to the public and that it intends to operate within the terms of its present license.

Chairman Philip Allen told the manager it might be well for the club to take another ad to clarify its position as a private facility. Selectman William Stewart added that he thought the club might be asking for trouble so long as its dining memberships are transferable.

Mets Official Speaking Here

The South Church Men's Club will hold a dinner meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 6 at the church. An elaborate smorgasbord dinner at 6:30 will be followed with an address by Hal Goodnough, veteran baseball official. Goodnough, long billed as baseball's premier goodwill ambassador, was a scout instructor and promotional director for the old Boston Braves. He has been promotional director for the New York Mets since 1964.

Diggings Discussed

A husband and wife archaeological team spoke to a meeting of the Northeastern Massachusetts branch of Archaeological Institute of America at Brooks School in North Andover this month.

Emily Townsend Vermeule, professor of Greek and art at Wellesley College and Dr. Vermeule, curator of the classical department of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts were the speakers.

Mrs. Vermeule told of a 3400 year old civilization on the island of Thera in the Aegean Sea which figured in the news recently as the possible site of the lost island, Atlantis. The professor is among the archaeologists working with the Thera excavating team whose aim it is to keep artifacts found where they are unearthed, protected by the existing roof of volcanic ash.

From Dr. Vermeule, members of the institute heard of Greek remains in Sicily, explaining how the ancient Sicilians used terracotta and limestone, plentiful on the island, and showed that their accomplishments with these materials were as successful and artistic as the Greeks' who used marble, which is rare on Sicily.

Such archaeological meetings are held one Sunday a month at either Brooks School or Abbot Academy. Announcement of future meetings will appear in this paper so that interested persons may attend.

As Others See Us

Andover Makes Friends For U.S.

Andover is more like Europe and England than Chicago, but not nearly so cosmopolitan as Rio de Janeiro - at least that is the way it looks to two very observant visitors from abroad.

Both are girls, both are bright eyed brunettes, but one is Latin American and the other is European. They are goodwill ambassadors without portfolios, students selected by the American Field Service to participate in a giant exchange program conceived in support of the premise that the best way to get people to understand one another is to give them a chance to know one another. One means to this end is the AFS method of arranging for students of many nationalities to live with families in other countries, attending school and becoming accustomed to the ways of a foreign country as it is possible to become in a year's time.

Two of these AFS students are enrolled at Andover High School. The Latin American is Claudia Moniz Freire, the daughter of a retired Brazilian Army officer. The European is Christine Bourcier, daughter of a French Air Force officer, a squadron commander who trains pilots.

The girls are finding school in the U. S. very different. Claudia has had to adjust to a longer school day, to having a part in selecting some of her courses and to changing classes. She has adjusted with predictable ease to attending school with boys and after trying it awhile, she makes the mature observation that she believes in co-educational schools because they are organized more nearly like the world young people live in when they have become adult.

Christine comments that the school system in Andover and that in her home town in France, a mountain village, are as different as day and night. One attends seven years of high school in France and in all that time, the student has no choice of subjects and is required to take as many as 11 in a single year. Also accustomed to girls' schools, Christine agrees with Claudia that young people learn to understand one another better if they sit side by side in the classroom. She finds that American teenagers are more frank, direct and natural as a result, though perhaps a little less studious than those in her country.

Claudia is used to apartment life in a modern district of Rio where apartments, theaters, stores, schools and the beach are all within a stone's throw of one another. Here, she says, everybody has a car. There everybody uses public transportation. And here, she adds, it is so quiet.

The Brazilian girl's mother is a career woman, operating from her apartment a custom lingerie business that attracts the daughters and wives of many of the dignitaries of her country. Most of the sewing is farmed out to woman who stitch the delicate imported fabrics in their own homes.

Christine finds everything in America bigger than elsewhere. In general, she says, French people tend to feel that Americans "are a long time children." The AFS visitor does not agree. She thinks that perhaps people here are a "little skin deep, a little contradictory," but not immature.

The French student came to Andover from Chicago where she was placed with a family that proved to be a bad match. Here she has settled into the family routine of the Donald Sagaser's at 56 Chestnut St. while Claudia is living with the family of Milton Greenberg at 46 Sagamore Dr.

Both girls enjoy the freedom American teenagers have in the home and the fact that they are freer to go out in the evening to social affairs, and even for work. Christine is already an accomplished baby sitter!

The students have great reservation about the United States' role in the Vietnam War and report that it is a most unpopular conflict in their countries. But they are taking their time forming opinions about the War and other controversial issues in America, waiting to become more familiar with how things look from inside the USA.

that teenagers of each generation start from a different frame of reference than the one which confronted their elders. "Their reactions to the values of our times seem to be rebellious," he said. But if the response of the adult community is wise, Gordon believes the social temptations youth is experiencing today will not have any more effect than those of the era of bathtub gin, the Roaring Twenties. "An enormous segment of the population continued to live conservatively then," he points out.

The Yale graduate continued that he recognizes the danger in such current social problems as drug usage and sexual freedom, but adds, "I don't accept any inevitability about them."

Mankind has been drugging itself in one way or another since the beginning of civilization, says Gordon, referring to his background as a student of history. Society has traditionally grappled with each problem of this sort as it has arisen, he says, reporting that his approach to grappling is to feed students with hard facts in the hope of stimulating spontaneous response.

The role of the school is to create an atmosphere that will encourage the growth of values, says Gordon. To do this you "just deal with kids as human beings . . . they have to be listened to, and that's the hardest thing, he admits."

Editorial Comment

Needed: Re-examination.

If School Committee negotiations with the Andover Education Assn. went as planned last night, the two bargaining teams have agreed by now to a salary schedule that will add a minimum of $100,000 to the departmental budget for 1968 or, stated in other terms, increases at the rate of $300,000 annually.

This is sobering news when coupled with other estimates from the superintendent which indicate that the town would have to spend $268,000 more on salaries next year than it is spending this year (in increments and increases) if it simply stuck with the present schedule and the present staff. Add another $200,000 for the some 50 new teachers which must be hired to satisfy normal growth and to staff the Bancroft School and you are talking about ADDED salary expenses of $590,000.

Armed with all sorts of statistics on median incomes, the AEA argues that Andover can afford this and more. It's bargaining team further contends that working conditions in local schools are so poor that Andover cannot hope to attract quality teachers unless it is willing to pay top dollar.

It is about time that the association is challenged on both points. Andover has moved rapidly in recent years to trim the difference between salaries paid to teachers and those commanded by college graduates in other fields, and she had managed this in spite of equally heavy demands from the school department for new and improved facilities to handle increased enrollment and educational advances.

Some few systems in Massachusetts offer higher salaries and there are others that have incorporated academic innovations with greater speed, adding to the professional challenge, but still and all, the teacher who comes to Andover is a long way from the bottom of the heap.

Before the School Committee and the AEA sit down to legalize the terms of a contract for 1968-69, they should think long and hard about the full impact of the agreement on the community and its economic stability. They should seek some hard facts about what lies ahead for Andover and explore the very real possibility that the community cannot continue to move on two school fronts at once and at the same time work to get from under the problems that have accumulated elsewhere while the school department has commandeered the lion's share of the municipal budget year after year.

There can be no doubt that a great many people in Andover can afford to support a top quality public school program and a heavy capital expenditures budget etc. without suffering. But Andover still has a great many residents who cannot afford it. If they are not to be driven from the community in search of cheaper living, if the town's population is not to become even more top heavy with the affluent than it already is, the leadership in municipal offices and public employees unions must learn to think in broader terms.

The Andover School Committee has traditionally lived in a fiscal vacuum, and there are no indications that the committee has gone into this year's bargaining sessions with any better idea than usual about precisely what the net effect of their actions will be.

This may well be the year that the public will fight back, demanding something more from the School Committee than nickel and dime economy. The taxpayer may be powerless to interfere with the salary schedule, but he is in a perfect position to effect some balance in expenditures by putting the brake on school construction.

Perhaps it will take a shock like this to force school politicians to re-examine their policies.

Reason For Pride

There were a lot of skeptics around a year ago when a group of dedicated idealists announced that they were willing to assume full financial responsibility for tuition and housing if the school department would agree to let them enroll 10 boys from disadvantaged neighborhoods at Andover High School.

When the School Committee refused to act - because the issue of race was involved - without a vote of confidence from Town Meeting, the faithful took it in stride and set about to convince the general public.

Having won approval for the educational program, the Andover A Better Chance Committee undertook the difficult task of finding a dormitory in a receptive neighborhood and raising the funds to purchase and equip it.

It must have been with great satisfaction that those closely associated with the project sat and listened at their recent annual meeting to reports of a successful first year. Residents have subscribed $8000 more than the $50,000 sought and have already paid in $34,000 of the total pledged. But even more important, the boys have made the adjustment to academic work in a high school with standards that provide a challenge and to life in a community that is radically different than that they call home.

The ABC Committee has reason to be proud.

What Our Readers Say

Disgusted And Appalled

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN

I was disgusted and appalled to read in your November 22nd issue the list of new contract proposals set forth by the Andover Education Assn. (teachers' union) for the 1968-69 academic year. A feeling of "featherbedding" best describes my reaction to the list as a whole.

The following points left me particularly aggravated:

1. "Sick leave shall be fifteen days per year with unlimited accumulation."

Aggravation - I assume the 15 days per year is in addition to the two months of summer vacation presently enjoyed. Hence, this results in 15 days for 10 months work or an annual rate of 18 days per year. Most businesses today grant 10 days.

Aggravation - Sick leave is a privilege to be granted only when required not a guaranteed right to be demanded. Hence, unlimited accumulation is unreasonable.

2. "Sick leave shall continue to accrue during a member's sabbatical leave."

Aggravation - This reminds me of the story of the union member who insisted he be paid for coffee breaks which he missed while on vacation.

3. "Each member of the professional staff shall be entitled to two days per year . . . he need not specify the reason for taking such leave. . .

Aggravation - What employer would put up with this sort of nonsense?

4. "Teachers shall be entitled to five days of professional leave per year."

Aggravation - I am also a professional but I do not expect my employer to grant me 5 additional days leave per year. Maintaining my professionalism is basically my responsibility. An occasional day off to attend a regional teachers' conference may be one thing but a guaranteed 5 days per year is unreasonable.

5. ". . . attendance by members at evening meetings are desirable . . . but . . . are not to be required as a condition of employment. . ."

Aggravation - What if such attendance is deemed desirable by school officials as being in the best interest of the student body?

6. "Any non-tenure teacher not elected to tenure . . . will be entitled to a hearing and . . . shall have the right to appear with counsel . . . and to call and cross-examine witnesses."

Aggravation - Is this a fair way to win tenure, rather than by hard work and devotion to cause? What has happened to the professionalism claimed by teachers?

7. "The committee will reimburse the complete cost . . . of up to six hours per year" . . . of advanced graduate work.

Aggravation - Do teachers consider they should pay nothing towards their own education? Is everything to be given freely in this welfare state?

8. "Four working days per year with full pay shall be allowed for death in a family."

Aggravation - I believe everyone should take on personal responsibility for some acts of God - responsibility for all such acts should not be shifted to employers.

There were many other items in the list with which I felt equally aggravated but I will not go into all of them. The entire approach of the AEA seems to ignore what may be best for the students or for the efficient operation and reasonable cost of the Town's school system. Instead AEA's demands obviously have been drafted entirely for the self-interest of its members.

Over a long number of years teachers have campaigned for higher compensation more comparable with their counterparts in industry. It seems to me if they now demand benefits and privileges far in excess of those which industry grants, they not only will lose much of the respect of the townspeople but will and should be considered as merely union employees making unreasonable and unwarranted demands. The AEA approach is counter to professional people who not only take great pride in their job and their profession but are primarily interested in serving society and its needs and placing such service above self-interest.

In all fairness I should point out that I believe many of Andover's teachers are truly professionals and do not subscribe to this AEA approach. I hope they will speak up against it and advocate instead a more rational approach of a "fair day's work for a fair day's pay". I also hope the members of the School Committee will be firm in their dealings with the unreasonable demands of the AEA.

It is evidence that some election bets were paid up by the appearance of several new silk hats Sunday.

Quite an incident happened at the United Presbyterian Church in Lawrence Sunday where an Andover student was preaching. It was just about the time for the opening hymn when the audience was perfectly quiet. Suddenly there was a downfall of several large chunks of plaster from the ceiling, bespattering the Sunday clothes of some of the worshippers. This was followed by the appearance of a man's foot and leg through a hole in the ceiling. It seems that the janitor had gone aloft to regulate the ventilators and had stepped on a weak spot in the plastering. The services soon went on as usual.

There have been 115 deaths in town so far this year, 11 more than for the whole year of 1891.

50 Years Ago - November, 1917

Daniel Hartigan is again on duty after an attack of tonsillitis. He is an apprentice in the Medical Naval Reserves.

Miss Edith Sellers has taken a position in the law offices of Sullivan Bros., Lawrence. Miss Sellers has been stenographer in the tax collector's office for several years.

George I. Ingram of Salem Street, son of Mrs. Mary Ingram, has received a commission as Second Lieutenant and will report for active service.

James B. Gillen, son of Mrs. Agnes Gillen of Summer Street, has received the appointment of first lieutenant of infantry and will report for duty December 15.

25 Years Ago - November, 1942

The long hills of Andover proved a bit too much for about 300 defense workers motoring into town yesterday's slippery morning, and a tieup of about 300 cars was caused by the failure of several of them to make the grade. Nearly all the drivers of the cars involved were enroute from Lawrence to their work at Marland's or Tyer Rubber and the traffic snarl was at the long slope from Shawshen Square to the entrance of the Wood Estate, and the hill approaching the railroad bridge on North Main Street.

Miss Dorothy Davidson of Lowell Street has accepted a position in the office of the Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Co. in Boston.

Abbott Batchelder of Argilla Rd. has enlisted in the Coast Guard.

10 Years Ago - November, 1957
A reconstruction program for Rogers Brook, costing an over-all $881,000 has been proposed by the State Division of Waterways. The town's share of the cost for the whole project will approach $450,000.

The Board of Public Works has received a letter from Henry Wolfson, in which the former Taxpayers Assn. head gives his reasons for believing the Shawshen Mill filter plant can handle domestic water supplies. This subject was debated briefly at the town meeting when the voters approved the permanent installation of two wheels and a long carrying main from Ballardvale to S. Main St.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Gaudet, 8 Juliette St., celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary Nov. 22.

The Maruzzi sisters, Lorna, Gail, Carol and Dianne, will be featured entertainers at the United Church Fair.

Once Over Lightly

... with the editor

On rare occasions weekly newspaper editors manage to escape routine, forget familiar woes and fasten their attention on some event that is devoid of any connection with sewage disposal, municipal construction, political squabbles and irate subscribers.

The Museum of Fine Arts offered suburban editors just such a diversion this month when it invited a group of them to Boston for a briefing on progress with the Museum's plans for expansion (half the necessary $13.4 million has been raised), a look at the current Turkish Treasures exhibit and a chance to try one of MFA's new Tele-Tours, a first rate bargain for the kind of gallery goer who is lured to the Museum time and time again, only to be frustrated by his overwhelming ignorance of what is exhibited.

Now there is an electronic solution. For 50 cents the art enthusiast can buy the personal services of an expert whose explanation of the show is neatly packed away on the tape in a compact shoulder bag. The Tele-Tour gives one complete freedom. You can tune the guide in and out at will, straying from his prescribed path of travel, stopping to linger over a favorite show piece or idling until the crowd thins around the treasure that is just ahead.

Tele-Tours cannot be guaranteed to make connoisseurs of knuckleheads, but they are a marvelous invention for those who dash in to see exhibits without advance preparation - which is practically everybody.

Parents of long hairs and others who are confused by a generation of boys that look like girls will be heartened to know that the Associated Master Barbers of Massachusetts have undertaken to publicize the virtues of shorn locks.

The association is distributing to schools signs with bold type which proclaim:

BOYS

The AMBM campaign is certain to be motivated by self-interest, but what does that matter if it brings results.

AGRI-FACT: Nat Tilden reports Mass. far out in front as No. 1 cranberry producer, accounting for nearly 1/2 world's supply. No. 2 Wisconsin picks the berries with machines in water-flooded bogs; we pick with machines on dry bogs, lose berries thru crushing. We may switch to water harvesting, which gets almost 100% of the fruit intact.

Editor's Note: Town Hall records show that the Board of Selectmen paid C. Lincoln Giles, former owner of the Safety Center site a total of $177,000 for the land. In addition, the Board expended $16,400 for demolition of the warehouse shell which was left standing on the property. As a further expense, the town has paid $2,347 in taxes on the property for that portion of the year remaining after municipal acquisition.

Fellowship Schedules Two Events

The Women's Fellowship of South Church will sponsor a Family Advent Workshop for families of the church on Dec. 3 at 4 p.m. and two days later, an appearance by bellringers from First Baptist Church of Beverly.

At the advent workshop, families will find handcraft projects available for each age group. The only materials for which there will be a charge are those to be used for the making of advent wreaths. Families attending may select from these projects: wall hangings, wooden creche and figures, cone work and tree decorations. Workers must supply their own scissors.

A Dutch-treat supper will be served by the Fellowship at 6 p.m. and the meeting will conclude with a short devotional service. The workshop is planned by the Christian education committee of the church for which Mrs. Walter Norris is chairman.

The bellringers' program on Dec. 5 will be held at 8 p.m. Friends are invited to attend the Christmas concert and refreshments will be served.

Ghetos Interest Churches

Some of the implications of the current "black revolution" in America for the work of churches in urban centers will be the principal thrust of a conference to be held in Springfield Dec. 1 at St. John's Congregational Church.

The gathering is being sponsored by the urban church committees of the state conference of the United Church of Christ in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Keynote speaker for the confab will be Dr. Frederick G. Adams, chairman of the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities. Dr. Adams is a dentist in Danbury, Conn.

There also will be a reactor panel from the black ghetto of Springfield which is being arranged by the Rev. Albert W. Garner, director of urban ministry, for the Greater Springfield Council of Churches.

This New England Regional Conference on Metropolitan Responsibility is being called by the three United Church conferences to seek the implications of the "black focus" for their urban church committees and to answer the question of whether their work should now be done on a New England regional basis.

Good Deed

Explorer Post 90, Boy Scouts of America, sponsored by Western Electric's Merrimack Valley Works, is about to undertake a noteworthy community project of repairing and reconditioning old tube-type radios for distribution among patients in nursing homes in the Merrimack Valley area.

ACC Plans New Promotions

After months of summer preparation, the Andover Chamber of Commerce this month launched a 12-month promotional program to stimulate retail activity in downtown Andover. The first event was the turkey-give-away held Thanksgiving Week when 18 holiday birds were awarded to local consumers.

According to Neil E. Davis, division manager assigned to the Andover Chamber by the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce, the Turkey Give-Away was a timely event that "Captured the imagination of Andover shoppers."

Davis joined the GLCC staff in July of this year to work as a consultant to the Andover Chamber. Just prior to his assignment, he attended Syracuse University's Organization Management School. Previous to that Davis was in charge of credit operations for Sherwin-Williams Co. He also held positions as credit manager for Sherwin-Williams stores in Haverhill and White Plains, N. Y.

From January 1959 to March 1962 he served the U. S. Army at Nike Hercules Missile Sites. He attended Haverhill Schools, Merrimack College, The Dun & Bradstreet Credit and Financial Management School and has completed Dale Carnegie Courses.

Other new promotional events which Davis and the retail committee have scheduled include: A Red Sox Ticket Give-Away for next April and a vacation promotion for October, 1968, which will provide free foliage trips to the Green and White Mountains for winners.

Service Clubs Will Honor Greater Lawrence Chamber

An estimated 300 business and civic leaders will attend a luncheon at Andover Country Club today honoring the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce because of its recent accreditation by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Charles R. Stark, manager of the northeastern division of the U. S. Chamber will speak and Irving E. Rogers Jr. of Andover will be toastmaster.

Stark, a former resident of two New England states has been with the U. S. Chamber since 1962, serving as manager of several districts in the western part of the country until March 17 of this year when he became manager of the northeastern division.

Word was received Nov. 2 that the Greater Lawrence Chamber, of which the Andover Chamber is an affiliate, had been accredited and that it was one of 20 business organizations in the country to receive this recognition under new stringent standards set by the national chamber.

Procedures

In order to become accredited, a chamber must appoint 10 committees to evaluate the organization's strength in various activities including program, public relations, membership, plant and equipment and financing. A report compiled from information collected by these sub-committees is submitted to the U. S. Chamber for study and once it appears that a local chamber meets national standards, a team is sent from headquarters in Washington for first hand observation.

The Greater Lawrence Chamber began its accreditation effort in 1965 when Dr. S. F. Cataudella was appointed chairman of the accreditation committee by Harry A. Loebel, then president of the Chamber. Under Dr. Cataudella's leadership, the ten investigative committees were established.

In 1966, when Dr. Cataudella became president of the Chamber, he appointed John C. Young of Andover to succeed him as accreditation chairman. This spring, during the term of Atty. Michael J. Batal Jr. as chamber president, the accreditation report was filed and an on-the-scene examination of the local Chamber was made.

Come In And Meet The McAndrew Pontiac Personnel

The new cars by Pontiac for 1968 in a wide range of styles and models are now on display at McAndrew Pontiac, Inc., located at 209 South Broadway in Lawrence. Pontiac has been third in sales for the sixth straight year, so if you haven't taken a good look at them lately, visit McAndrew Pontiac soon and see what you have been missing in automotive styling and performance.

There are five new Firebirds, for every kind of driving. One of the most successful new sports cars of 1967, the Firebird is showing a host of refinements that make The Magnificent Five even more exciting for 1968. New rear suspension enhances the ride. New engines move them. New interiors of glove-smooth expanded Morrokide add new luxury. A new upper-level ventilation system eliminates the vent windows, leaving you with a big picture-window view of the world.

The strikingly new Bonneville is the largest Pontiac made, on the longest, smoothest-riding wheel base, yet it carries its grandeur with remarkable agility. In the hardtop coupe and four-door hardtop, you can select either exquisite cloth and expanded Morrokide, or all expanded Morrokide as your upholstery. In the Bonneville convertible expanded Morrokide is combined with genuine leather. And all Bonnevilles have wall-to-wall nylon blend carpeting, vinyl on the instrument panel ... and the trimmings go on and on.

McAndrew Pontiac will be happy to show you the Bonneville Brougham, the most elegantly styled Pontiac ever made; the Executive, featuring big car roominess combined with a long, low wheel-base; the beautiful Venturas; Catalinas; LeMans; Grand Prix; GTO; Tempest Custom; and Tempests. Any car may be ordered with as many or as few options as you desire.

When you buy your new Pontiac from McAndrew's, you know you are dealing with a dependable firm. They have been in business at the same location since 1959 with a full line of these fine automobiles. Stop in and see any of their salesmen: Joseph Marlen, Joseph Sullivan, Frank Wholey, Armand Dallare, Lewis Hajjar and John McAndrew. McAndrew Pontiac, Inc. is open until nine Monday through Friday, and closes Saturdays at five o'clock.

A display of the new and of the old favorite books appropriate to the season will be found in the trough on the main floor of Memorial Hall Library opposite the desk. Included are how-to's on decorations and things edible and traditional. There are stories for all ages for reading aloud and books on Christmas customs around the world.

The real significance of the Day is captured in many of the anthologies. A new one is A CHRISTMAS BOOK edited by Eleanor Sayre. In the pre-Renaissance times the story of the Nativity aroused direct and simple emotion, a response difficult to find in the twentieth century. These almost-forgotten poems and carols, beautifully illustrated, have been edited by the assistant curator of prints of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Why not put reading into your Christmas observance with some of the wealth of material you will find at the library? Christmas books circulate for a seven-day period. Reading Service

December first at ten in the morning, Mrs. Pauline Downes will meet with adults who would like to have her read to them. Her program can cover every sort of interest from the daily paper, to short stories or poetry. She will be glad to have your suggestions. Why not call the library or Mrs. Downes whose number is 683-4196. Great Books

The Fifth Year group will have their Dec. 5 topic Bergson's TIME AND FREE WILL, one of the Great Books of the Western World. Copies of the reading are available at Memorial Hall Library. So if you have been meaning to join the Great Books discussions, but have been putting it off, why not borrow TIME AND FREE WILL and read the three chapters that will form the basis of the meeting? The public is always welcome at any Great Books event.

Some topics that are sure to come up for consideration include timely questions raised by Bergson (who lived until 1941) as: Can human behavior be predicted? Does free will ultimately reduce itself to a feeling of being free? Does Bergson consider the individual's will the cause of his actions?

DELIGHT CHRISTMAS DAY guests with a good old-fashioned eggnog made from country-fresh products and garnished with nutmeg. And serve it again during the coming holiday season.

Egg Nog Is Holiday Special

Football games, hikes in the woods, trips through the brilliantly colored countryside, and a big Christmas Day dinner are all part of the traditional fall season in New England. A perfect treat to serve your guests on a typical crisp New England Fall day, particularly Christmas Day when family and friends drop in, is an old-fashioned eggnog garnished with nutmeg. This custard base eggnog, made from country-fresh products, can easily be prepared and served at special occasions during the coming holiday season.

Holiday Eggnog
3 cups milk
1 cup light cream
1/3 cup Sugar
2 eggs yolks
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites
3 tablespoons Sugar
Combine milk and light cream, Scald, Beat 1/3 cup sugar into egg yolks. Add salt. Slowly stir in milk mixture. Cook in double boiler over hot, not boiling water, stirring constantly until mixture coats spoon. Cool. Add vanilla. Beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually add 3 tablespoons sugar, beating until soft peaks form. Add to custard and mix thoroughly. Chill 3 to 4 hours. Serve from punch bowl. Sprinkle with grated nutmeg. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Museum Lists Plans

Every Sunday afternoon at 2, 3 and 4 p.m. there will be tours of the castle, which features examples of sculpture, painting and the minor arts as well as architectural portions taken from dwellings and churches abroad. A tour of the candle-lit Great Hall displays the stained glass windows and Gothic interior of the hall and the sound of the 10,000 pipes of the castle organ.

Way Cleared For Motor Mart Expansion

The Zoning Board of Appeals has approved two petitions which will permit expansion and modernization of Shawsheen Motor Mart on Haverhill Street across from Raytheon Co. along with full development of an adjoining lot for parking.

The petitions were entered by Ellsworth H. Lewis, Motor Mart owner, and opposed at hearings in August and September by a number of residents from the neighborhood.

Lewis' first request was for a variance from setback regulations to permit an addition to the present garage building. The auto dealer told the ZBA that the property must be improved and modernized if his dealership is to compete successfully with others operating under modern conditions and that he would suffer substantial hardship if the variance were to be denied. The garage is a non-conforming use in a residential district and its location on Haverhill Street predates the town's zoning regulations.

A month later Lewis requested a special permit to use a parcel of vacant land adjacent to the garage for parking and he presented plans for a fenced-in, hot-topped area. He told the board at a public hearing that use of the lot for parking is essential to the operation of the Motor Mart and that if the petition were denied, he would not be able to continue his business at that location. Lewis has owned the Motor Mart since 1936 and the adjoining lot since 1953. He reported, however, that he has used the lot for parking, under a verbal agreement with the owner, since he moved into the garage and that its use for that purpose has been extended in recent years.

The neighbors who opposed the two requests, both at hearings and by petition, pointed out that the auto dealer has been using the vacant lot for parking in violation of zoning regulations. They objected to the fact that part of a stand of pines that once stood on the lot has been cut and that increased use of the property for parking has resulted in deterioration of the neighborhood.

Some others, however, agreed with Lewis that he had been virtually forced to make greater use of the lot after tighter restrictions on curb parking were established, in answer to the demands of residents, to control the parking of Raytheon Co. employees.

The Decisions

In one decision, the ZBA ruled that Lewis can use the open lot for parking providing he erects the six foot fence shown in plans presented to the board, surrounds it with a green strip and plants shrubs as described at the public hearing.

Parking on the lot is restricted by the board's ruling to employees' cars, customers' cars, no more than 10 used cars being held for sale (for no longer than 14 days), new and used cars requiring service prior to being displayed for sale and trucks, farm equipment, earth moving equipment and other such equipment being held for sale or lease.

The decision specifically says the lot shall not be used for storage of junk vehicles, that it shall not be used for selling vehicles other than those stipulated as suitable for parking there, that no signs or advertisements shall be located on the lot and that no lighting other than a single floodlight, beamed away from Balmoral Street, shall be permitted.

In giving its approval for construction of an addition to the garage, the board restricted Lewis to use of a "Ford" sign of smaller dimensions than he requested, stipulating that it should be no larger than 13' long and 4' high. It approved the location and dimensions of two other signs as proposed.

Library Exhibits Fish Lures

If you are not familiar with what looks tasty to a famished fish, stop by Memorial Hall Library for a look at an exhibit of colorful man-made flies that will be on display in the adult reading room through Dec. 9.

The exhibit is part of the Federation of Fly Fishermen's program to promote and encourage the best techniques of fly tying and the ancillary art of fly fishing. Included are flies tied by A.I. "Pal" Alexander of Andover, who is vice president of the Federation, and local Postmaster Francis Mooney.

The flies and fly plates were made by the United Fly Tyers Inc. of Boston, a member club of the Federation. The same plates were exhibited recently at the Conclave of Fly Fishermen held at Jackson, Wyoming, where they won the coveted McKenzie Fly Fishers' Award, a pastel drawing of a pair of McKenzie rainbow trout. The drawing is one of the very last done by the late Tommy Brayshaw who was an outstanding wildlife artist.

Along with a collection of fly tying books, the exhibit is intended as the nucleus of a larger display which it is hoped will encourage interest in fly fishing.

The Federation of Fly Fishermen is a national organization which consists of 40 angling clubs, approximately 2000 associate members and a small number of commercial firms.
